COMPANY FORMING TO ABOLISH SEWERS AND CLEAN UP ALL WATER COURSES; DISCOVERY IS PECK'S

A company is being formed in Stratford to exploit a discovery made by Chemist Thaddeus Peck, which has for its purpose nothing less than the abolition of all sewers and the freeing of all water courses, including Long Island Sound, from contamination by sewage.

The discovery consists of a chemical to be used in small quantities upon the matters discharged into the sewers, so that all fluids involved become a sweetly scented liquid, indistinguishable from the compound sold in drug stores as aromatic spirits of ammonia.

The solid elements, it is claimed, become deodorized and may be reclaimed for use as fertilizer, none of the constituents being impaired for the latter purpose.

Thus the company claims that it is in a position to accomplish two great results, namely, the obliteration of all sewage systems, except so far as they are needed to carry away storm water, and the restoration of valuable material to the land.

The proposed company is to be known as the Globe Sanitary, Utility and Purity Company. One of the promoters of the company expressed its objects, speaking today as follows:

"We will make every home clean and pure as nature designed it to be, clear of all refuse, filth and unpleasant features, it will mean also the purification of the streams, all the water courses, rivers, harbors, bays, and Sound, making them likewise clean, wholesome, habitable by its occupants of fish and shell fish of every kind as in the days when they were not polluted by the present filthiness, recklessness wastes and improvidence of mankind."

Peck's discovery is a liquid with a strong ammonia odor. A very small quantity of this liquid is poured into a container in which is to be deposited the material to be deodorized. The result is said to be quite startling. The by-products are fertilizer and large quantities of fluid which, it is claimed, cannot be distinguished from true ammonia.

The process may also be used for the reduction of garbage, it is asserted.

MAMA WOULDN'T LET HER MARRY

At Least Little Jersey Girl and Her Beau Didn't Come Back for License

A very dapper chap, and a very stylishly dressed little girl were much chagrined, yesterday afternoon, when they learned at the office of the town clerk that they could not get a marriage license in this state because the bride to be is only 18 years of age.

"Eighteen years is the age of consent in New Jersey," said Fred E. Williams, the prospective bridegroom, who said he was a collector of Caudwell, N. J., aged 21.

The girl, who is Miss Emma K. Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Anderson of Brooklyn, N. Y., assured Town Clerk Thomas that her mother had given her consent. But the clerk said he would have to have the consent in writing.

The unsigned license was waiting for the couple at three o'clock this afternoon.

Deputy Cunningham Makes First Service Beyond Bridgeport

Deputy Sheriff Thomas J. Cunningham, yesterday afternoon, took his first trip out of town in the performance of his duty as a deputy sheriff, attaching 30 acres of land in New Canaan, the property of Jennie M. Hawley Levee, in a suit for $50,000 brought by her brothers, William and Alan Hawley, of New York. The brothers had obtained a judgment for $34,850 in the New York court, which judgment had been satisfied.

During the past week Judge Curtis, in the Superior Court, heard a suit for $9,000 brought by the brothers against their sister, on a note, and withheld his decision.

Barnum's Town Out By Tens of Thousands to Celebrate Circus Day

First came the riders with their brilliant uniforms, trumpeting to herald the approach of the procession. Then came a big brass band upon a gorgeous float representing the Eastern Hemisphere. Next came the famous blood sweating behemoth of holy writ, a patient animal that for many years has been the object of the circus' damnable to wet the curiosity of the prospective circus patrons.

Mounted upon milk white steeds, gorgeously gowned, graceful girls drew the attention of the spectators. Looking stern as St. George pursuing a rattlesnake, came the occupants of a float depicting the Golden Age of Chivalry. Bravely they perspired under the weight of mailed suits as they rode their ponies unaided at the fearsome wooden dragons that cavorted about atop the float.

Then came the prohibition party's emblem, the camel, who goes eight days without a drink. There were dozens of them striding through the streets like ships on a heavy sea. In pursuit of the camels came a negro band which burst forth ever and anon into syncopated snatches of Southern symphonies.

Equestriennes of rare grace and matchless charm mounted upon the flower of the herds of the world, gracefully acknowledged the plaudits of the multitude with a fleet smile hither and thither, mostly to the women and children, with one of them. The clown band, flanked by a horde of mischievous youngsters, attracted its usual share of attention. Clowns with their float resplendent with new paint surrounded by her languorous Egyptian maidens, here undepicted away while she was within sight.

Then came Uncle Sam, nonchalantly rolling a quid of Veteran in his cheek as he surveyed with approval the admiring patriots who chanced to beam with delight upon his martial environments.

Twenty-three peerless pachydermic prodigies, premier proboscidean performers of the world, ambled along under the watchful eye of Harry Mooney, the man who makes the elephants do stunts. In the rear of the elephant parade happened along the immense auto truck of the Blue Ribbon garage, loaded to the gunwales with boys. More than half a hundred packed into the truck like so many sardines, yet that junk out in just approval of the wisdom of the Board of Education in according them a holiday.

What is a circus parade without a steam calliope? It is not a circus parade. Barnum's calliope wound up the procession with a medley of the latest of Broadway's song favorites, including School Days, the Good Old Summer Time, and other song hits of the day-before-yesterday.

There was some class to that parade. Then we all ran home and asked father for the price to go to the matinee.

Just double the number of cars will be run on all city lines, beginning at 6:50 tonight. Every other car will run to the circus grounds. The regular schedule will thus prevail uninterupted. The trolley people plan to run a car from the center of the city to the circus grounds during the rush hour tonight.
